

BERNHARDT AND SOCIETY.

While Bernhardt was in San Francisco she was socially entertained by Mrs. Will Crocker, the acknowledged leader of society in the city.

This shocked some of the moral writers of the Argonaut who dumped a couple of columns of abuse on Bernhardt which appeared a few days after she had sailed for Australia. Just as the same paper did a few years ago in the case of Adelaide Patti, showering her with abuse while her car was speeding Eastward through Illinois.

The woman came to California as the leading dramatic artist of the world, acknowledged by the critics of Europe to be the equal of Rachel. Her private life is the business of nobody, she has never posed as a saint and whatever may be said of her, she has never been charged with hypocrisy. She faced the world with a son born out of wedlock, rather than engineer its disappearance after the manner so much in vogue among the higher society woman whose teas, hops and kettle-drums the Argonaut is so fond of chronicling.

The Wave, the acknowledged organ of good society in San Francisco, (not the parvenue class) commends Mrs. Crocker for extending the hospitality of her house to the great artist whom it pronounces the most distinguished guest entertained in California for several years. It says:

The announcement in last week's issue of the charming manner in which Mrs. Will Crocker had entertained Mme. Sarah Bernhardt at breakfast, has caused much discussion. The humble opinion of "The Witness" has been asked regarding the propriety of showing the great actress any private hospitality. I firmly believe that no more notable or fit person has been received, entertained, or feted in any house in San Francisco this year than Madame Bernhardt. And when I say that, I do not forget that we have had Mr. Harrison with us, or that Mr. Stanley and his wife were here. Nor do I forget the hundred and one nonentities whom we have made welcome within the past twelve months. Which of you would have entertained Benjamin Harrison, lawyer, of Indianapolis? John Wanamaker, dry goods dealer, of Philadelphia? Jeremiah Rusk, farmer, of Wisconsin? However the full propriety of it is settled; to receive Madame Bernhardt is good form; none of us will lose either dignity or respect by entertaining her in the future.

Mrs. Will Crocker, one of the leaders of society here, has taken the actress by the hand, has honored her as a guest. Mrs. Crocker is in possession of all the facts or stories connected with the actress; she is thoroughly conversant with everything that has been said or written about her, and the hostess at this memorable breakfast is as much entitled to our admiration for her good sense as is the guest for her genius.

A Dumb Judge.

The San Francisco Star openly charges that Fisher Ames paid Judge Levy of San Francisco $30,000 to decide the Treadwell suit and that the money came from Mrs. Treadwell. The Star has several times asked the Judge if $30,000 was not the amount he received, and he has not seen fit to answer or arrest the editor for libel.

The fact that the Judge is erecting a $17,000 house on a $10,000 piece of ground, all on a salary of $3,500 a year would seem to furnish an explanation of Judge Levy's peculiar silence.

But then one must bear in mind that there is hardly any case involving large interests, where money is not plunked into pocket of the court in San Francisco.

The Bee says a Nevada mining man named G. H. Howard started out at Sacramento to see the elephant. He filled up on exilir and was robbed of $1,200 in greenbacks and a certificate of deposit for $500.
